This course offers a global perspective on the history of materials, energy, manufacturing transportation, and communication technologies from earliest times to the Industrial Revolution. The interplay between technology and the pursuits of material wealth, political power, and military victory will be a central theme in this course, as will the relationship between early science and burgeoning technology.