

States of Incarceration

A National Dialogue of Local Histories

States of Incarceration is an exhibition and series of programs created by over 500 students and community partners in 17 states. Conference events and programming highlight subjects connected to the history of Seabrook Farms, the focus of Rutgers–New Brunswick students' contribution to the exhibit.

A frozen-foods agribusiness in Cumberland County, New Jersey, during World War II Seabrook Farms recruited 2,500 incarcerated Japanese Americans released on parole from so-called internment camps in the western interior of the United States.

Events and panels seek to explore not only the history of Seabrook Farms and Japanese Americans' incarceration, but also the issues that agricultural workers—who are mainly immigrants—face today.

For more information please visit our site:

libraries.rutgers.edu/SOI

CONFERENCE
February 28–March 2, 2018

View the Program and Register:

go.rutgers.edu/uoqtxuch

RUTGERS
THE STATE UNIVERSITY
OF NEW JERSEY