

The Scarlet and Black seminar will focus on the history of African Americans in Rutgers history from World War II to the present. Students will work with primary documents on subjects like: the impact of the Freedom Movement on campus life; the difference black student life experiences on the Camden, New Brunswick and Newark campuses; the black student life experiences on the Livingston, Douglass, and Rutgers, New Brunswick campuses; the black alumni remembrances of Rutgers and where they are now. Students will work in archives at Rutgers and across the state and will write papers based on their primary research, some of which will be incorporated into Volume Three of the Rutgers University Press Scarlet and Black series.