The Rutgers British Studies Center Presents

Concrete City: Brutalism and Preservation

This one-day conference, featuring social historians, architectural historians, and preservationists will offer an opportunity to discuss the latest scholarship on brutalism, mass housing, university design, and preservation.

ADRIAN FORTY, Professor
Bartlett School of Architecture, University College London
'The Invisibility of Brutalist Architecture'

SIMON GUNN, Professor
Centre for Urban History, University of Leicester
'The Road to Brutalism: Urban Renewal and the Changing Material Fabric of Britain’s Post-War Cities'

BARNABAS CALDER, Lecturer
Architecture Faculty, University of Strathclyde
'Concrete and Mortarboards: Brutalism in Academia'

ELAINE HARWOOD, Senior Architectural Investigator
English Heritage
'The Conservation of Brutalism: Contrasting Experiences in Universities and Housing in England'

RICHARD LONGSTRETH, Director of Historic Preservation and Professor of American Civilization
American Studies Department, George Washington University
'Buildings People Love to Hate'

February 17th, 2012  9:00 a.m. - 5:30 p.m.
Alexander Library
169 College Avenue
New Brunswick, New Jersey

Cosponsored by Cultural Heritage and Preservation Studies

http://britishstudies.rutgers.edu