A Public History Symposium

NEW JERSEY STORIES:

New Perspectives on American Paintings in the Zimmerli Art Museum

This event will feature presentations by Rutgers graduate and undergraduate students and faculty on artwork from the American Art Collection at the Zimmerli Art Museum. The culmination of a yearlong project to expand knowledge of individual paintings in the university’s collection, this work explores connections between these historical objects with histories of race, class, and property in the University’s past, as well as that of the local community and broader New Jersey and regional contexts.
